people are living with another medical condition or disability as well as dementia.

Rural Data

- ▶ Data obtained from the State of Rural Services 2016 (SORS 2016) state that those aged 65 and over comprise 23% of the rural population, well above the 16% of the urban population. In many rural areas in the UK as indicated above the percentage of older people can be as high as 56% of the total population for that area (CFAS II, 2011).

Rural Data

- ▶ People with dementia stay five to seven times longer in hospital than other patients. This is further exacerbated by the loneliness and isolation experienced by some people living in rural communities. Lonely people have a 64% increased chance of developing clinical dementia (Holwerda et al, 2012)

Rural Data

- ▶ Research finds that 24% of older people in rural communities are themselves carers and projections indicate that the number of old people in need of care will grow enormously, faster than the number of their children who might help provide it (SORS 2016).

Dementia in Farming

- ▶ Where possible farmers should plan ahead for the eventuality of ill health (including dementia) or retirement. This should include Lasting Powers of Attorney, succession planning and so on.
- ▶ There is a need for joined up thinking and working between statutory agencies, dementia support organisations and rural communities, with initiatives such as dementia friendly parishes.

Dementia in Farming

- ▶ Farmers can be reluctant to ask for help, fearing a loss of privacy, yet they need help to network with each other. Mutual support and experience-sharing is a particularly valuable way for farmers who are reluctant to engage with formal agencies, to gain access to farming-specific help .

Dementia in Farming

- ▶ There is a need for all agencies working with farmers to undergo dementia training. Agencies working with farmers can become dementia friends.
- ▶ Lessons can be learnt from initiatives to combat farming stress. Main concern is for farmers and their families to recognise issues and seek support.
